

The Grass is Looking Greener

1. Thoughtful moments of good times that you've had
A hint of leaving restless times can make you feel so bad
Fond memories linger in your mind
Seize the moment and leave the past behind

Chorus.

The grass is looking greener at the other side
The struggle deep within you can't hide
You always seem to contemplate what you might lose
There comes a time in life when you must choose the way

2. The days feel hollow when looking out for more
Save the questions it's time for you to open up the door
Of hope within the morning light
Let strength enfold you and ease that endless fight
3. Fragile moments patience wearing thin
Always searching, reaching for a courage deep within
Your heart, beating time so fast
A song for freedom, inner peace at last

This song is about something that everyone has to deal with at some point of their lives. Often we want to move on from the stage we are at onto better things but there is a fence that we have to cross to get there. This fence is made up of doubts and worries of leaving the things we know and are comfortable with for something that is better but a step into the unknown. Until we make the decision to cross it we are often consumed with restlessness and frustration.

I often feel that Scotland as a nation suffers from this and needs to build the courage and confidence to cross the fence and on to better things.

Iain Thomson